

----- english -----

On Thursday, September 24th, the federal and state governments will meet for the so-called 'refugee summit' to further tighten asylum law. Under the slogan 'Doing away with misguided incentives!', they're pushing a law package whose goal is to make Germany as unattractive as possible to refugees. Among other things, it includes the reintroduction of residence obligation, handing out non-cash benefits instead of money, and faster deportations by the means of expanding the list of 'safe third countries'. In spite of the population's humanitarian help, racist mobilization and physical attacks on refugees are daily routine in Germany. Hidden underneath the media's coverage of the 'new German culture of welcome', the government's political answer continues to be one of walls-up and deportation. Hence we'll bring our protest to the Federal Chancellery and say loud and clear

Racism is the problem

Resolve the home secretary crisis

Stop the tightening of asylum law

TOP B3rlin | Seit 2006

---

Quelleadresse: <http://top-berlin.net/de/texte/beitraege/die-innenministerkrise-loesen>